Accidental celebrity-in-residence Jonathan Christakos has been a Tarpon Springs legend since his parents drowned the week after he was born. The rare brain cancer that nearly killed him as a teenager has come back now that hes on the wrong side of 40. His chances of survival are near zero. How hell navigate his last six months on earth is anyones guess, but Jon wont go gentle into that good night. Just ask anyone in the Greek Village. Hes been a lightning rod for the good, bad, and ugly things that happen in the Sponge Capital of the World. And theres no telling whose lives, fortunes, and fates will change should a storm hit and hes still around. It would be a damn shame if he wasnt, but dont be surprised if Jon Christakos gets an 11th-hour reprieve from Heaven. Hes long overdue a miracle. EPIPHANY MAN, the second novel by D. B. Patterson, author of PERDIDO RIVER BASTARD, is rated PG-13 for adult language, situations, and themes; for mild drug and alcohol use; for mild violence and scenes of sensuality; and for myriad wonders of the heart and soul. Reader discretion is advised.
